Evgeny Taboriskiy

The work of Evgeny Taboriskiy is an exploration of the plasticity of space and the meditative nature of art using sustainable practices. “Sustainable art begins with seeing potential in what already exists. It transforms everyday materials into something meaningful, asking us to rethink value, presence, and space”, says the artist.

Formerly active as a graphic designer, he graduated from the Kharkiv Art School and the Kharkiv Art and Industrial Institute (today the Academy of Design of Ukraine). He has participated in international competitions and exhibitions, published in renowned professional journals, and worked as a lecturer and publicist.

After more than a decade of intensive practice in digital photography, his artistic path gradually evolved toward creating his own compositions using the technique of assemblage. These works emerge at the intersection between personal imagination and the hidden laws of artistic convention.

In his early works, Taboriskiy used natural materials like stones, branches, and pebble. Today, his range of materials has expanded: from semi-precious stones and construction debris to, experimentally, completely ordinary objects and materials of everyday life. In the artist’s hands, they gain new rhythms, new balance, and an unexpected poetry.

Taboriskiy defines his art as meditative: it is free from action and narration. The focus lies on the creative process, the inner rhythm, and the balance of form and color. Each work becomes a space of contemplation in which the viewer can experience a personal sense of stillness and harmony.

The project is titled “My Spaces” – a reminder of how existing materials and forms can be carried into new contexts. It highlights that art itself is a mindful dialogue with materials, a respectful engagement with what already surrounds us.
